

I believe tests should still be required for amateurs to advance from one license to another. If we assume that years of experience would give someone the ability to operate at a higher level of efficiency, then we can also assume that that person should be able to pass a test to exhibit their increased knowledge.